Training

For an uncertain future

- Operating in hostile environments
- Managing health and medical emergencies
- Permanent and mobile training teams
- Courses for staff in remote areas
- Training for public sector and emergency services
- Confidence to cope in challenging situations

Training

We offer training to staff working in hostile environments. All our courses are practical and ‘hands-on’. A wide range of visual aids and role-play add to the reality of the training experience. Examples include unexploded devices, replica firearms, simulations, communications equipment and medical scenarios.

Courses have been conducted in many countries around the world and we are happy to run courses at client locations.

Our overseas training centres enable us to provide experience in remote, medium and high-risk environments. Our UK training centre is set in 1900 acres, just an hour outside London. The area provides realism enhanced by its buildings, barns, outbuildings, woods and four miles of off-road track. Accommodation is included.

For staff

The importance of a highly trained workforce, who have the necessary skills to perform their work or projects safely, cannot be underestimated. We provide a variety of training for different circumstances. For example, we prepare people for working or travelling in hostile environments on different levels from core security principles and awareness to advanced driving, fire and medical training.

All our medical courses are delivered by qualified medics and include the standard First Aid at Work (FAW) skills and advanced First Person On Scene (FPOS) courses.

Driver training and mobility courses include offensive and defensive driving techniques, off-road 4x4 on rugged terrain and armoured vehicle driver training.

Fire training shows staff in a practical way the various types of fire management, prevention, warden system, fire safety, fire-fighting techniques and how to use different equipment.

Our instructors

Our instructors are subject matter experts and have first hand experience operating in various high-risk areas.
